Workshop Description:

Consensual Qualitative Research (CQR) is a particularly useful research method in clinical psychology involving subjective experiences (e.g., experiences and feelings about marriage, trauma, psychotherapy, research, teaching, meaning in life, religion, and attachment). In many ways, qualitative research is similar to the tasks involved in conducting psychotherapy (e.g., interviewing, listening carefully, trying to make meaning out of words), so it is a particularly compelling method for clinical psychologists.

In the first hour of this workshop, the presenter will introduce a rationale for conducting qualitative research. Then, the presenter will provide a brief overview of the steps of CQR, focusing on interviews, domains, core ideas, cross-analyses, auditing, and consensus. The remainder of the workshop will be spent on participant application of the method in small groups. In order to practice the tasks of CQR, participants will need to bring laptops and/or cell phones with recording capability.

Please contact us in advance if you require special accommodations on the day of the event.

The Wright Institute Presents:

To get the most out of the workshop, participants might read Dr. Hill's book ahead of time: Hill, C. E. (Ed.) (2012). Consensual qualitative research: A practical resource for investigating social science phenomena. Washington DC: American Psychological Association.

Instructor Bio:

Clara E. Hill earned her Ph.D. at Southern Illinois University in 1974. She started her career in 1974 as an Assistant Professor in the Department of Psychology, University of Maryland and is currently still there as a Professor. She has been President of the Society for Psychotherapy Research, Editor of the Journal of Counseling Psychology, and Co-Editor of Psychotherapy Research. Awards include the Leona Tyler Award (Society of Counseling Psychology), the Distinguished Psychologist Award (Division 29 of the American Psychological Association), the Distinguished Research Career Award (Society for Psychotherapy Research), and the Outstanding Lifetime Achievement Award (Section on Counseling and Psychotherapy Process and Outcome Research, Society for Counseling Psychology). Her major research interests are helping skills, psychotherapy process and outcome, training and supervising therapists, dream work, meaning in life, and qualitative research. She has published 229 journal articles, 77 chapters in books, and 14 books (including Helping Skills, Dream Work in Therapy, Consensual Qualitative Research, and Meaning in Life).

After attending this workshop participants will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a brief interview using standard questions and follow-up open-ended questions
2. Summarize the three basic steps of CQR
3. Explain how to develop a domain
4. Discuss core ideas
5. Prepare a cross-analysis
