Workshop Description:

This presentation will focus on the development, research, and application of the Wright-Constantine Structured Cultural Interview (WCSCI), which helps assessment psychologists develop an understanding of the cultural and personal context of clients they are assessing. Based in Pamela Hays’ ADDRESSING framework, the tool is applicable across different populations. The presentation will include not only the content of the structured interview, but considerations in the process of actually administering it.

After completing this workshop, participants will be able to:

• Identify areas of culture that need evaluating to create a comprehensive cultural contextual understanding of clients.
• Identify how their own power and privilege can affect the interviewing process.
• Apply the WCSCI to use in clinical psychological assessments.
• Discuss advantages to situating assessment findings within a cultural framework.
